

FRIEDMAN MUST HAVE LICENSE TO PRACTISE OF THIRD AVENUE CARS

County Medical Society Outlines Only Possible Plans for Demonstration.

NO MENACE, SAYS LEDERLE

Health Commissioner, After Private Session with German Physician, Approves Turtle Serum.

Dr. Friedrich Franz Friedman can demonstrate his turtle serum for consumptives only by securing a state license for the practice of medicine or by serving on the staff of some duly incorporated hospital without salary or fee.

This is the opinion of the "Comitia Minora" of the Medical Society of the County of New York, which met at the Academy of Medicine, No. 17 West 42nd street, last night, to consider the case of Dr. Friedman and his efforts to make his cure known here.

The meeting, which was also attended by Dr. Ernest J. Lederle, of the Department of Health, was held in part for the consideration of a communication received from Dr. Friedman asking the views of the body on his request.

As a result of the deliberations, the Comitia issued an announcement in which it expressed its unanimous opinion that the laws of the State of New York regulating the practice of medicine should not be suspended for the benefit of any person. This decision bears on the matter of practice without a license.

The Comitia also voiced the opinion that the public health laws should be enforced in regard to all persons, without discrimination.

Suggest Two Ways Out.

It expressed itself, on the other hand, as of the view that every opportunity should be afforded to Dr. Friedman to demonstrate his cure, and suggested that this might be done in two ways.

The first is that the Commissioner of Education, on the recommendation of the Board of Regents, give a license for practice to physicians from outside the state, provided those physicians occupy a position of eminence.

The second comes under the application of the medical statutes, which prohibit any physician practicing, without the demonstration of a cure, provided the physician is attached to an incorporated hospital and serves without salaries or fees. The Comitia recommended that an application on these grounds be made by Dr. Friedman to the Health Commissioner.

Dr. Ernest J. Lederle had invited the Berlin doctor to a conference at the office of the Board of Health, at which Dr. Herman A. Elkes, general medical officer of the board, and Dr. William H. Parks, director of laboratory research, were present.

It appeared from a statement made by Commissioner Lederle last night that Dr. Friedman convinced him that there was nothing in his treatment that could be regarded as a menace to the health of the city, and so far as the Board of Health was concerned, no objections would be made to his demonstration of the serum.

Asked to give some idea as to what the Friedman secret was, the Commissioner said he and his associates had received the information in confidence.

According to Dr. Friedman, he will surely begin his treatment for tuberculosis to-day or to-morrow at the latest. The young, trim-appearing germ discoverer, speaking in person for the second time since his arrival, read from a piece of paper, in English, the following statement:

"I am beginning my treatment to-morrow, or, at the latest, the day after to-morrow. More I cannot tell to-day."

Besieged by Consumptives.

The ill advised announcement that treatment would begin yesterday at No. 229 Fifth avenue, where a lease was denied to the doctor, was a source of disappointment to scores of seekers who had not learned of the change in the plans. The Waldorf-Astoria was also invaded by many consumptive persons who sought the doctor to make appointments in person.

The usual number of promoters and schemers called on the turtle germ discoverer, and some of these were entertained. Just inside the door of the doctor's apartment another doctor, B. F. Wooding, M. D., of Denver, was handing out to visitors large yellow circulars telling of the merits of "Wooding's Automatic Train Control," the chief invention of the doctor. What Dr. Wooding or his invention had to do with the consumption cure did not appear.

It was learned yesterday that Dr. Arthur C. H. Friedman is no longer connected with the "American Hecco Company," of which he has been hitherto the American representative, with offices at No. 41 Exchange Place. In fact, there is no American Hecco Company. Dr. Friedman some months ago, while promoting a coal land proposition in London, became the American representative of the Hecco Developments, Ltd., a responsible English concern that controls electrical patents, and has nothing whatever to do with the turtle germ "cure."

NEW YORKER FOUND DEAD

Mystery in Fate of Robert J. Kelsey in Chicago House.

Chicago, March 2.—A man believed to be Robert J. Kelsey, a printer and publisher, of Honeyock Falls, N. Y., was found dead last night in a rooming house here, where he had lived for two weeks under the name of Joseph Brown. The body was lying on the floor, with a pillow beneath the head and a wound on the forehead.

His identity was established from papers in his pockets, which showed that he carried $1,000 life insurance, William Dunworth, of Dodge City, Iowa, a cousin, being named as beneficiary.

Rochester, March 2.—Robert J. Kelsey published "The Times" in the village of Honeyock Falls until four months ago, when he went to Buffalo and subsequently to Chicago. He was about thirty years old and had no relatives in this vicinity.

BILL TO SAVE FACTORY BOARD.

Albany, March 3.—The life of the Wagner-Smith factory investigating commission would be continued by the provisions of a bill introduced to-night, at the request of Senator Wagner. The bill carries an appropriation of $50,000 for expenses.

NINE HURT IN CRASH OF THIRD AVENUE CARS

Three Victims Pinned Between Seats Taken Unconscious from Wreckage.

LAWYER BADLY INJURED

Panic Among Passengers When Northbound Car Jumps a Switch and Rams One Going South.

Jumping the track between 65th and 66th streets, a northbound Third avenue surface car crashed into an oncoming southbound car about 7 o'clock last night. When policemen and railroad employees forced their way into the twisted wreckage they found three people were unconscious, two of them seriously injured, and six others had been hurt.

Jarvis P. Carter, a member of the law firm of Edwards & Carter, at No. 22 Liberty street, and living at No. 890 Park avenue, was in the front seat of the southbound car. When taken out he was senseless. At Flower Hospital it was found he had suffered severe cuts and bruises. There was an eight-inch laceration in the flesh of his left arm, causing a hemorrhage.

Pinned between two seats near him was Mrs. Yetta Weinstein, of No. 35 Cherry street. She, too, was unconscious when taken from the car. She was taken to Flower Hospital. Her legs and body were badly bruised, but no bones were broken. David Clifford, of No. 123 East 50th street, who had been sitting in the front seat of the northbound car, was found in an unconscious condition, but recovered. He refused to go to a hospital, although his right knee was badly bruised that he had to be carried to a taxicab, and his right and left hands were both severely cut by flying glass.

Patrolman Flanagan, of the East 57th street station, was on duty at 65th street. He called out the reserves, who rushed up about the time that Drs. Quaglia and Taylor arrived from the Flower Hospital with ambulances. The wreck occurred just in front of the car company's Third avenue barns, and a host of employees ran out to aid in getting the people out. Both cars had been jammed, and there was pandemonium for a few minutes. The platform of the north bound car had been smashed away, and there was a four-foot crash in the side of the other car.

Among those whom Dr. Taylor treated after Dr. Quaglia took Mrs. Weinstein and Carter to the hospital were John McCarthy, of No. 222 East 71st street, bruises of the arms and head; Louis Trushinski, of No. 255 Henry street, bruises of the right knee; Salvatore Comino, of No. 181 Second avenue, contusions of the legs; Mrs. Bessie Lynch, of No. 211 Amsterdam avenue, contusions of the chest; John R. Kahn, of No. 127 Park avenue, bruises of the right arm, and Rayfield Black, of No. 239 East 121st street, badly bruised head.

Most of the material damage was done to the northbound car, which was in charge of Patrick Kennedy, a motorman, of No. 156 East 85th street, and Peter Regan, of No. 129 East 103rd street, was the conductor. The southbound car was driven by James Sullivan, of No. 239 East 65th street, Michael Lovenstein, of No. 88 East 167th street, was the conductor.

A dense crowd surrounded the wrecked cars, and Captain Dominick Henry, of the 65th street station, had to station lines of men to keep the people back. Alarming rumors spread through the neighborhood. The lights in both cars had gone out, and all that could be seen was a straggling swarm of passengers and rescuers.

A wrecking crew from the car barns opened up traffic in about 50 minutes. At the barn a man who said he was the general superintendent of the system refused to give any information to newspaper men. Captain Henry had a theory that the cause was due either to a rock on the track or a bolt that had fallen from the elevated railroad. Others said that one of the switches in front of the barns had thrown the car from the track.

DEFENDS STRIKE LEADERS

Giovanitti Says the Authorities Are the Law Breakers.

Arturo Giovanitti, speaking last night before a meeting at No. 66 East 14th street to protest against the trial of Little Falls, N. Y., said that the authorities and not the strikers were the real enemies of the right of free speech and of picketing. If this was violence, he asserted, then it was fully justifiable, because the authorities were guilty of legal violence in preventing them from exercising their lawful rights. The men who were prosecuting the fourteen strikers, he said, were "owned" by the alk manufacturers, and under the circumstances it would be difficult for the unions to obtain their acquittal. But he appealed to the working class to stand behind them with funds and united support. He hoped that eventually the workers would be able to do away with courts in the settlement of labor disputes.

Elizabeth G. Flynn, W. J. Karlin, Frank Pease and Professor Horowitz all made strong pleas for union solidarity in dealing with the strike situation at Little Falls, and charged as an outrage the imprisonment of the strikers.

MEAT SALESMAN FINED $200.

Charles Huse paid a fine of $200 in Special Sessions yesterday for exposing unfit meat for sale. Huse is salesman for Steers & Menke in West Washington Market. The carcasses of ten pigs which were spoiled as foodstuff were found in the shop in January.

SILVER FOR JUSTICE DELANY.

Justice John J. Delany, of the Supreme Court, president for the last two years of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, was the recipient last night at the regular quarterly meeting of the organization in the Hotel Astor of a check of $1,000 as a recognition of his activities. The presentation was made by Judge Morgan J. O'Brien.

KUEHNLE MUST GO TO PRISON.

Trenton, N. J., March 2.—The State Supreme Court on today affirmed the conviction of Louis Kuehnle, the political leader of Atlantic City. It was charged that while Water Commissioner Mr. Kuehnle awarded to himself a contract for $250,000 worth of municipal work. He was sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

GAYNOR SEES SALOONS ALL SHUT ON SUNDAYS

No Liquor Graft Under His "Outward Decency" Plan, He Boasts.

ASSAILS SIX CLERGYMEN

"Nasty Newspapers" Also Come In for Attack at Real Cold Water Dinner of Brooklyn Club.

Mayor Gaynor attended a fresh water dinner last night, given by the Young Men's Club of the Sumnerville Methodist Church, of Brooklyn, at the Hotel Mohawk, in that borough. He told the young men, old men and women present that he would rather attend that cold water dinner twenty times over than one where real, true firewater was served.

Although thus expressing his preference for the softer element, the Mayor was not averse to talking about the cup that cheers. He informed his audience he had done something in this city which was never done before, and that was to close all the saloons on Sunday. He offered a prize to any one who would find for him a saloon open on any of the three coming Sundays. He even went so far as to say that he would bestow the prize on the lucky mortal who saw any one drinking in a saloon on those days.

The Mayor unflinchingly admitted he had done pretty well to stop Sunday drinking in New York. It was the greatest foreign city in the world, he said, and he realized, as Mayor, that its population was made up of all kinds of people, who had to be governed accordingly. Now, if the Methodists, he told his hearers, could get them to spend Sundays on the benches of their churches, that was perfectly satisfactory to him, but if they told him he ought to drive them there with the clubs of policemen, he begged to tell them that he ought not.

"Leave Some for Children."

"You can't teach religion or morality by force," said the Mayor. "You must do it by persuasion. And that will take a long time. You can't do it all. You will have to leave some of it for your children, so that they won't be lonesome for something to do."

The Mayor continued: "Can you stop a man from drinking on Sunday if he wants to? You may be getting at his heart and making him love water more than beer. But you can't do it by force."

"In no nation on the Continent of Europe did they ever have such a thing as not drinking on Sunday. Yet they do here in Brooklyn. Just look up the figures. You will see that our percentage of churchgoers is very small."

"No such thing as ever passed in the world, until it was passed over here, except that in England, Scotland and Ireland the law closes the bars during the church hours. But over here we have to keep our saloons closed all day on Sunday. But that same law permits us to join the Union League Club and there we can swing all day. I don't see why we can't join the Union League or the Montauk or some similar club in Manhattan should swing grog on Sunday any more than the poor man who has to buy his in a saloon."

No Saloon Graft Now.

"Some of you say there is drinking in the rooming rooms or in the rooms with people rent in the hotels. That is true. You ask why we don't stop that drinking. The reason is because the law permits drinking to be served with meals and meals have dwindled down to a sandwich in the last few years."

We can send the police in there in plain clothes and have them buy a drink and then prosecute the proprietor, but as soon as you do that you are grafting on the saloons. When I became Mayor the saloons were paying about $2,000,000 a year in graft. Not $1 is being paid to-day."

Then the Mayor branched off to talk about one of his favorite topics—clergy. All the clergymen in the city understood him, he said, except six—he thought the number was six. He had great respect for the main body of the clergy, he protested, but not for those who needed only cap and bells to make them mountebanks; not for those who wrote a column each day in some "nasty newspaper" under their own pictures. Most clergymen didn't think they were handsome enough to do that, he said.

"I wonder if Jesus would do it if he were here?" mused the Mayor. "I'd like to put it up to him. I think He would make a better selection of newspapers, anyway."

He had a great respect for most of them, the Mayor repeated, but not for the six, no, sir! They just wanted to hurt his feelings, to make him feel badly, to add to his burden. He hoped Rabbi Wise wasn't as bad as that, but he had him in mind, he admitted.

Then the Mayor told of the troubles he was having to convince the city that all the recent graft indictments in and around the police force were the logical outcome of the rigid enforcement of the law, for which his latest two commissioners, Cropper and Waldo, were directly responsible.

FORM NEW-CITY CLUB

Organization Plans to Start with $10,000 in Treasury.

One hundred and fifty well known professional men of this city have formed a new city club that will have its town home in Brooklyn and its country headquarters somewhere in Nassau County. Jacob Brenner, the Republican district leader, is president of the temporary organization; Joseph M. Schapp is treasurer and Leonard Drayfus secretary.

Ralph K. Jacobs is chairman of the prospectus committee; Meier Sternberg, of the membership committee, and Oscar C. Lewis, of the bylaws committee.

More than twenty-five of the members have promised to subscribe $100 each toward the funds of the club, besides their annual dues of $50. The club will not start activities until it has $10,000 and can begin without any financial burdens.

The idea of the members is to form an organization in which their wives and children can join, and there will be special arrangements made for women and juniors. The plan is to perfect a country club with features of the country club and the athletic association combined. At first the club will hire both its city and country homes. It is already negotiating for both. The old home of the Crescent Athletic Club, in Clinton street, has been offered to the organization.

Only Three May Accompany Findlay Douglas Abroad.

ST. ANDREWS THEIR GOAL

Uncertainty as to Great Britain Being Represented at the U. S. Championship.

With regard to the proposed foreign invasion of American amateur golfers, the impression has assumed almost the proportions of a conviction, especially on the other side, that comparatively few will make the journey. In a recent conversation with Findlay S. Douglas, who originated the idea of having a party of amateurs compete in the next championship tournament at St. Andrews, Douglas admitted that there was a good deal of doubt as yet as to the exact personnel of the so-called team. He said that E. M. Byers might not be able to make the trip because of increased business responsibilities. In fact, Byers so stated only a few days ago.

On the other hand, a report from abroad has it that the "big team" has been divided down to a mere three—W. C. Fownes, Jr., Heinrich Schmidt and Myers. This statement does not coincide with previous declarations made from time to time by a number of well known amateurs in this vicinity, but the chances are that in a matter of this kind it will be next to impossible to count upon a player until he has booked his passage.

Appropos of international uncertainty, is the possible representation from Great Britain in the United States Golf Association championship tournament to be held at Garden City early in September. The usual early rumors are in the air, but there is nothing positive. It may be well to remember, however, that the early fall selection is bound to be a convenient time for such Britishers who might wish to make the trip. Furthermore, Garden City being so handy to New York this year's scene of action is bound to appeal more to the foreigners than an extra day and a night railroad journey, as was the case last season.

In his annual report, Leighton Oakes, president of the Plainfield Country Club, speaks encouragingly of the organization's progress. The membership during the year was 57 active members, as against 52 in 1911; 269 juniors, as against 290, and 21 non-residents, as against 18 in 1911. The club lived up to its promise to operate within its income and is without floating debt of any kind. The bonded debt was reduced $1,000 as usual and now stands at $2,300.

The work of lengthening the course, which has been in progress for the last year, is now practically completed. As soon as the weather permits work on the new thirteenth and fourteenth putting greens will be resumed, and it is expected that these will be in readiness for play when the regular season opens.

The report of the golf committee calls attention to the fact that for the first time in five years the club took part in a team match with another club. On a team of twelve defeated the Cranford Golf Club on the latter's course, 9 to 7, while on October 19 there was a return match at Plainfield, when there were twenty players on a side. This time Plainfield also won, 20 to 7. Both of these matches were four-ball affairs, the scoring being according to the Nassau system.
